

Jacqui Morrissey - Governor Profile

I was born in East London and moved to Norwich as a child, spending many happy hours sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I went to Reading University to study philosophy and then started my career in the voluntary sector. I ran a charity shop for a few months whilst volunteering for an emergency relief organisation, which fortunately then gave me a job, and I never looked back! I worked in international development for many years, studying for a Masters degree whilst working, and was privileged to travel to a wide variety of countries spending time working overseas as well as in London. More recently, I've been working to support people in the UK and the common thread throughout my career has been trying to give a helping hand to some extremely vulnerable, but truly amazing and resourceful people.

I moved to Carshalton in 2007 and worship at St Patricks Church in Wallington. I've got two very energetic boys in Reception and Year 2 and thoroughly enjoy supporting school life as much as I can. I'm delighted to have been elected as a parent governor and look forward to using my skills and experience to help the school continue to develop and thrive.
